RFQ Clarification

Q: If a firm only provides some of the design services listed in the RFP, may they only submit for those selected services, or will they be required to submit on all services by proposing with teams including other consultants who can perform those services?

Q: Under "evaluation", it says that HASCO plans to select one or more firms that are best qualified to provide the services, are you looking for a team of firms that includes all your services or selecting firms for each of the described services? For example, are you looking for a submission from a team of architecture, landscape architecture, land surveying, geotechnical, and engineering firms or from each individually?

HASCO Response: HASCO is looking for multiple firms across the services outlined in the RFQ. The goal is to build a "roster" of firms for each category. If firms provide multiple services, they should outline which services they are proposing on. Firms are not required to build a team to address the various services.
